of movements, acquisition of language and refinement of visual, auditory and tactile perception.

Picture a place where you and your infant are free to explore and enjoy a Montessori environment, learning from each other's movements and reactions. The focus of this unique program is to aid parents as they experience the first year of their child's life, using Montessori methods and materials. One morning each week parents and infants come together with the facilitator to experience an environment set up to encourage development chance for parents to observe their child as he or she builds relationships with other toddlers and to acquire insight into their child from a Montessori perspective.

Toddlers are curious. It's this probing nature that drives them to discover the world in which they live. This program encourages parents to give their child independence to investigate on his or her own. This allows the young explorers to develop budding skills such as fine and gross motor coordination and visual discrimination, through the senses and learning materials. The weekly meeting is a
